“The Circle of Healing” - Nalin K. Nirula & Renoo Nirula

Some healers continue to be puzzled by our healing approach where we recommend that in addition to channeling healing for their own lives and issues, they also should channel healing for larger issues of the environment and society they live in.

Influences from family members, friends and associates, co-workers, and others we come across impact us daily. For example, channeling healing to the Empower Project for healing of corruption in the nation's public life, and for the benefit and progress of citizens, creates a similar resonance of healing in our personal lives to uplift and benefit us.

Channeling healing for natural disasters helps to heal and prevent disasters that naturally appear in our lives from time to time. Helping others creates a corresponding and greatly increased energy of help that we receive from the universe for everything in our lives.

Therefore, simultaneous with the first step of healing oneself, as progressive healers, we must channel healing to everything we come across in life, and everything that comes across our field of attention. The circle of healing starts and ends with everyone.

They question the relevance of doing that. "Is not healing our own lives most important?" they ask. The answer is, that, healing your own lives involves healing others as well. Yes, the first order of work is to use the healing for your life, and by simultaneously channeling healing to others you achieve personal beneficial results in a greatly magnified way.

Sudden shock wave events can affect our jobs, financial security, personal safety and security. Sending healing across to distant points, for healing those affected by events like earthquakes, tsunamis, fires and other natural disasters, channels healing to forestall and change similar karmic upheavals due to appear in our own lives.

Healing such situations that do not seem to affect us directly, heals similar events due for us or even that which are taking place in our lives. This happens through the universal resonance of similarity arising from the healing work. The resonance changes individual karmic signatures that attract such events, and modifies and even eliminates such due karmic events.

When healers channel healing to the Empower Healing Project, not only do healers help change the oppressive corrupt nature of political governance at the local and national levels, but also in their own lives.

Just as there is the rule of a government that aims for society to function in an orderly way, there are similar pressures in our life. The application of these rules may fall short of the objective in practice, and so need healing help.
